town, (Copang.) I remembered that Mr. Handy, who had travelled from the United States, . take charge of a cochineal plantation, and I plain." was curious to see how he looked and flourished in such employment. I had forgotten his name, but inquiring on the road for an American del Norte, was directed to the nopal of which he had charge. It was one of the largest in the place, and contained four thousand plants. I rode up to a small building in the middle of the plantation, which looked like a summer-house, and was surrounded by workmen, one of whom announced me as a Spaniard, as the Indians generally call foreigners. Dismounting and giving my mule to an In-dian, I entered and found Den Henriques sitting at table with an account book before him. settling accounts with the workmen. He was dressed in the cotton or jacket of the country, and a very long beard; but I should have recognised him any where as an American. I addressed him in English, and he started at me, as if startled by a familiar sound, and answered in Spanish. By degrees he comprehended the matter. He was under thirty, from Rhinebeck Lunding on the Hudson river, where his father keeps a store, and his name was Henry Pawling; had been a clerk in New York and then in Mexico. Induced by a large offer and a strong disposition to ramble and see the country, he accepted a sech of seid days proposal from Mr. Handy. His business was to go on before the caravan, hire a place, give notice, and make preparations for the exhibition of the animals. In this capacity he travelled all over Mexico, and from thence to Guatemala. It was seven years since he left home, and since parting with Mr. Handy he had not spoken a word of his own language; and as he spoke it now it was more than half Spanish. I need not say he was glad to see me.

A BANK MAN. 'We were toiling on toward the top of the mountain, when, at a sudden turn, we met a solitary traveller. He was a tall, dark-complexioned man, with a broadbrimmed Panama hat rolled up at the sides; a striped woollen Guatemala jacket, with fringe at the bottom, plaid pantaloons, leather spatter-dashers, spurs and sword; he was mounted on a noble mule with a high peaked saddle, and the butts of a pair of horseman's pistols peeped out of the holsters. His face pistols peeped out of the holsters. His face was covered with sweat and med; his breast and legs were spattered, and his right side a complete incrustation; altogether, his appearance was fearful. It seemed strange to meet any one on such a road; and, to our surprise, he accosted us in English. He had set out with muleteers and Indians but had lost them in some of the windings of the wood, and was seeking his way alone. He had crossed the mountain twice before, but had never known it so bad; he had been thrown twice; once his mule rolled over him, and nearly crushed him; and now she was so frightened that he could hardly urge her along. He dismounted, and the trembling beast and his own exhausted state confirmed all he had said. He asked us for brandy, wine, or water, or unything to revive him; but unfortunately our stores were ahead, and for him to go back one step was out of the question. Imagine our surprise, when, with his feet buried in the mud. he told us that he had been two years in Gautemala, 'negotiating' for a bank charter,-Fresh as I was from the land of banks, I almost thought he intended a fling at me; but he did not look like one in a humor for jesting; and, for the benefit of those who will re- STATE OF VERMONT, BE it remembered that at a gard it as an evidence of incipient improve- District of Ruland, ss. LAZOING. 'It was the season for marking and numbering the cattle, and two of the Senores Aycinana were at the bacienda to superintend the operation. The cattle had been caught and brought in; but, as I had never seen the process of lazoing, after dinner a hundred head which had been kept up two days without food, were let loose in a field two or three tiles in circumference. Eight mon were mounted, with iron spurs, an meh long on their naked heels, and each with a lezo in hand, which consisted of an entire cow's hide cut in a single cord twenty yards long; one end was fastened to the horse's tail, which was first wrapped in leaves to prevent its being lacerated, and the rest was wound in a coil, and held by the rider in his right hand, resting on the pommel of the saddle. The cattle had dispersed; we placed ourselves on an elevatios commanding a partial view of the field, and the riders scattered in search of them. In a little while thirty or forty rushed past followed by the riders at full speed, and very soon were out of sight. We must either lose the sport or follow; and in one of the doublings, taking particular care to avoid the peace procured a small supply which they now offer for sale BUET & MASON. throng of furious cattle and headlong riders, I drew up to the side of two men who were chasing a single ox, and followed over hill, through brush and underwood; one rider threw his lazo over the horns of the ox, and then turned his horse, while the ox bounded to the length of the lazo, and, without shaking horse or rider, pitched headlong to the ground.

At this moment a herd swept by, with the whole company in full pursuit. A large yellow ox separated from the rest, and all followed him. For a mile he kept ahead, doubled and dodged, but the horseman crowded him down toward the lake; and after an ineffectual attempt to bolt, he rushed into the water. estered, and one horse and rider rolled over MOFFAT'S VEGETABLE LIFE MEDI-cines.—These medicines are indebted for their name to their manifest and sensible action in purifying the springs and channels of life, and enduing them wit renewed tone and vigor. In many hundreds of certified cases which have been made pulsin, and in almost every species of passes to which the human frame is liable, the happy effects of Moffot's Life Pills and Physics Bitters have been gratefully and publicly acknowledged by the persons benefitted, and who were previously unacquainted with the beautifully philo-sophical principles upon which they are compounded, and up-which they consequently act.

The LIFE MEDICINES recommend themselves in disease efevery form and description. Their first operation is to loss on from the costs of the stomach and bowels the various impurities and cruditierconstatity settling around them, and to remove the hardenedfaces which collect in the convolutions of the smaller intestines. Other medicines only partially clean these, and leave such collected masses behind as to produ-habitual costiveness, with all its train of evils, or sudden dishabitual costiveness with all its train of evils, or sudden durrhers, with its connect dangers. This fact is well known to all regular matument, who examine the human bowells after death; and hence the prejudices of those well informed men a gainst quack medicins—or medicines prepared and heralded to the public by ignorant persons. The second effect of the Lefe medicines is to clause the kidneys and the bladder, and by this means the liver and the large, the beauthful action of which entirely depend upon the regularity of the 'urinary or gains. The blood, which takes its red color from the agency of the liver and the lungs before it powers into the beart, being thus purified by them, and nourished by food coming from a clean stomach, courses freely through the veins, renews every part of the system and triumphantly mounts the banner of health in the blooming cheek.
